BIG10+ Postdoc Research Development Series

Writing a Standout Research Story

Tuesday, September 23

2-4 PM ET / 1-3 PM CT on Zoom

An effectively communicated research story is the most critical piece of any funding application. But most researchers find it challenging to write clearly - much less persuasively - about complex, not-yet-completed projects for a reviewer audience. Drawing on example abstracts, aims, and approaches, this session will break down the must-haves of a compelling proposal and your path to get there. Join us to discover how to:

- Distill your big project into a tiny abstract
- Craft a research strategy that reviewers enjoy reading
- Optimize your drafting process, with or without Al
- Gain a clearer research vision from the writing process

This workshop will be presented by Alicia Williams, PhD, Science Editor at the Morgridge Institute for Research in Madison, WI.
